Tasting notes

This wine is made from a selection of Chapoutier's oldest Marsanne (some more than 100 years old) situated at the top of the Hermitage hill, behind the chapel, in a place named the Ermite with very poor granitic and shallow soils where there is no alluvium deposited by the Rhône River. The very poor, granite soil therefore yields powerful, more austere wine than those from Ermitage in the other selections. This is the most structured of Michel's white Hermitage and the rarest of all his wines. It shows great elegance and intense minerality typical of concentrated Marsanne.
