Tasting notes

---

Gaja's Sorì San Lorenzo is made from old vines on south facing slopes and is usually the most concentrated of the single vineyard Barbarescos with the capacity to age for 30 years or more. The 2009 follows very much in this style with intense, deep plum and dark berry aromas with notes of black mulberry fruits, wild herbs, exotic spices and truffles. The palate is intensely rich with masses of deep, dark fruit balanced by a magnificent structure with firm, perfectly integrated tannins. An elegant mineral character and hints of dark chocolate with a spicy, cedar note on the finish gives superb depth and great definition. The is a very impressive and multi-layered wine with masses of depth and though remarkably appealing now it has plenty of ageing potential and deserves at least 10 years in bottle before drinking.
