About the producer

Originally named Monastery of San José de Aguarón, the monastery located in Cariñena was surrounded by vineyards cultivated by the monks to produce wine. Their vineyards are composed primarily of Garnacha, Cariñena, Tempranillo and Macabeo vines, with a large proportion of these being over 40 years old. San José produces some of the finest Macabeos in the region, which are from selected vineyards at an altitude of around 500 metres altitude. All grapes are harvested at the very start of the day to retain freshness and the contrasts of temperature between day and night help to give the grapes their intense flavour.
